14. Behavior of bird/circumstances of observation (flying, feeding, resting; include and stress habits used in identification; relate events surrounding observation): Birds seemed to be at rest the entire time; others have reported seeing evidence of nest-building at other times. Numerous apple snail shells present around the entire area, which is no surprise since apple snails have been reported to be a favorite food of this species.
15. Description (include only what was actually seen, not what "should" have been seen ; include if possible: total length/relative size compared to other familiar species, body bulk, shape, proportions, bill, eye, leg, and plumage characteristics. Stress features that separate it from similar species): Long-billed, long-legged wader about the size of an ibis or medium-sized egret or heron, with downcurved orange-based, dark-tipped bill (similar shape to an ibis, but not as curved), body color brown with white specks. Male and female similarly plumaged.
16. Voice: loud squealing/rattling call somewhat reminiscent of some gulls.
17. Similar species (include how they were eliminated by your observation): Bird only superficially could be confused with an immature white ibis, but very easily separable in the field. Behavior not the same; bill shape not as decurved as White Ibis; bill and body color readily differs. Might be considered looking "rail-ish." Species is unique.
