Annual Meeting: 13 March 2010

Synopsis of the 2010 LBRC Annual Meeting

by: Donna L. Dittmann, Secretary
& Steven W. Cardiff, Chair

The LBRC's Annual Meeting was held on 13 March 2010 at the LSU Museum of Natural Science.

The following Voting Members were in attendance: Steven W. Cardiff (Chair), Paul E. Conover, Donna L. Dittmann (Secretary), James L. Ingold, Dave Patton, Curtis C. Sorrells, and Phillip A. Wallace. The following Alternate Members were also present: Nancy L. Newfield (First Alternate) and B. Mac Myers III (Second Alternate).

The meeting was called to order at 10:00 AM and adjourned at 5:15 PM.

Election of LBRC Members

Following nominations, elections were held: Phillip A. Wallace and Paul E. Conover were each re-elected to a new 3-year term as Voting Members; Nancy L. Newfield (First Alternate) and B. Mac Myers (Second Alternate) were re-elected as Alternate Members. The officers, who hold 1-year terms, were also re-nominated and re-elected: Steven W. Cardiff (Chair) and Donna L. Dittmann (Secretary).

Record Review

Voting Members reviewed 72 first circulation records. Records included on the agenda were chosen at the discretion of the Secretary, and mainly involved well-documented, relatively non-controversial occurrences supported by photographic or specimen evidence most easily reviewed in a meeting format and with a high probability of acceptance (as outlined by the LBRC Bylaws; see <http://losbird.org> for online copy).

Brown-chested Martin

(Phaeoprogne tapera fusca)

Superficially resembling an overgrown Bank Swallow (note size comparison to Tree Swallow on the right), this immature male Brown-chested Martin (2009-96) is characteristic of the southern and migratory subspecies P. t. fusca showing heavy spotting below the breast band down the center of the breast. Discovered in northern Cameron Parish on 6 September 2009, this record represents the first occurrence for Louisiana, one of few from North America, and the second specimen for the United States.

For all first circulation records reviewed at a meeting, member votes are without comment and anonymous, and for a record to be accepted it must receive a unanimous vote. If a record vote is not unanimous, then the record will begin a traditional first circulation via email.

Records reviewed at this meeting included many submitted online and appearing on page 9 of the “View Pending Records” page at the LBRC website: <http://www.losbird.org/lbrc/viewreport9.html>.

In addition to reviewing recent records supported by photographic documentation at annual meetings, the Committee is also gradually reviewing older specimen records of Review List species that have never been specifically reviewed by the LBRC (or included in its record roster); a number of these were also reviewed and appear in this current batch of accepted records.

Sixty-eight first circulation records were accepted at the meeting. Three records did not receive a unanimous vote and will circulate in an e-round. One record was pulled from review because the specimen did not key out as anticipated and thus this record requires additional review and analysis and will circulate at a later date.

Highlights of recent records accepted at the meeting include two species new for Louisiana: Green-breasted Mango and Brown-chested Martin. One additional species was formally “added” to the State List: the first record of Cassin’s Vireo is a specimen that had never been formally reviewed and published, though it appeared on the Review List. Previously ‘accepted’ (grandfathered in by the LBRC) but also never officially reviewed include first state records based on older specimen evidence: Black-bellied Whistling-Duck, Wilson’s Storm-Petrel, Rough-legged Hawk, Band-tailed Pigeon, Hammond’s Flycatcher, Green-tailed Towhee, Brewer’s Sparrow, and Scott’s Oriole. The hawk, pigeon, towhee, and sparrow are taxidermy mounts that are on public display in the George H. Lowery, Jr. Hall of Birds at the LSU Museum of Natural Science (see pgs. 4 and 6).

Other first circulation records of particular note included the second state records of Cassin’s Vireo and American Flamingo. The American Flamingo record (LBRC 2009-35) involves the now famous “HDNT” (on left in photo below); see also p. 4.

Louisiana’s second record of Hooded Oriole (1989-116) finally receives a decision vote!

Misplaced between its first and second circulations, this record finally completed its third circulation many, many years after it was submitted. With no decision following three circulations, this record went to a Discussion Round vote at 13 March 2010 Meeting. Twenty+ years later, and although not unanimous, the record was accepted. Six observers (including past and present LBRC Members) submitted long forms, which helped make this record one of the more thoroughly documented records for that period in LBRC history - and many of those same observers also voted on the record as LBRC Members. B. Mac Myers III was the only observer able to obtain photographs; his best are scanned (and slightly adjusted) and shown at right. Unfortunately, most of the slides were over exposed and none show definitive details of the plumage or bill. During review, some members expressed concerns over confusion with Orchard Oriole noting overall size and shape of the throat patch were more similar to that species. Plus, in one photograph it was thought that there may be a chestnut feather on the breast. Members who accepted the record pointed to a number of characters visible in the photographs that corroborated more detailed written reports, namely the apparent long slender shape, long tail, gray flanks, and general orangish coloration. Most members dismissed the possibility of a hybrid. Outside expert opinions by Paul E. Lehman and Jonathan L. Dunn further supported the identification as a Hooded Oriole.

First spring male Hooded Oriole (1989-116) on 29 April 1989, Cameron: Cameron, vicinity of Cameron Parish Courthouse; David P. Muth, Robert D. Purrington, B. Mac Myers III (all photographs shown), Phillip A. Wallace, Curtis C. Sorrells, and Paul Sunby.

For more information about identification confirmation of this hybrid see: Clark, W. S. and C. C. Witt. 2006. First known specimen of a hybrid Buteo: Swainson's Hawk (Buteo swainsoni) X Rough-legged Hawk (B. lagopus) from Louisiana. Wilson Journal of Ornithology 118: 42-52.

This Rough-legged Hawk (LSUMZ 4803) mount located in the LSU Museum of Natural Science public exhibits not only represents the first state record of this species, but is the only record documented by hard evidence. A second specimen originally identified as a Rough-legged Hawk (but never reviewed by the LBRC; center specimen above) was later re-identified as a Rough-legged X Swainson's hawk hybrid (see LBRC 10th report: http://losbird.org/jlo\_v8.pdf) - the possibility of this hybrid combination compounds the difficulty of identification of Rough-legged Hawks in Louisiana. The mount above was identified by the taxidermist as an immature female, but William S. "Bill" Clark suggests (from examining photographs of the mount) that the plumage indicates an adult male instead (we are currently unable to access the specimen for a definitive wing chord measurement).

The meeting's agenda also included several records requiring a fourth and final Discussion Round vote. Of particular note was the second state record of Hooded Oriole (1989-116). This "ancient" record was accepted during its Discussion Vote (see p. 3).

Additional Business

The meeting ran much longer than anticipated, so other items of business on the agenda will be resolved by a special meeting, email, or tabled until the next Annual Meeting. These items include further discussions regarding introduced status of Monk Parakeet, and proposals to consider removal of Bell's Vireo from, and addition of Long-tailed Duck to, the Review List. Also slated were deliberations revisiting removal of Cave Swallow from the Review List and addition of American Black Duck, as well as a discussion regarding eastern US status of Trumpeter Swan.

"HDNT" revisits Louisiana spring of 2009. Last seen in the state during Sep-Oct 2007, its reappearance (LBRC 2009-35) -with the same traveling companion Greater Flamingo - was a pleasant surprise for Louisiana observers who missed this pair's previous visit. Banded as a chick at the Ria Lagartos Biosphere Reserve in 2005, HDNT represents one of few US records for which provenance is known; more information on p 5.

During this visit, HDNT was still accompanied by an escapee Greater Flamingo (P. roseus) "492," as was the case during their first Louisiana visit in September-October 2007 (Dittmann and Cardiff 2010; J. La. Ornith 8:133-134: http://losbird.org/jlo\_v8.pdf).

Visit LSUMNS's Public Exhibits

The George H. Lowery, Jr. Hall of Birds at the LSU Museum of Natural Science offers more than a peek at the State's diversity of bird species; it includes specimens of a few of the first occurrences for the State. As the museum's founder, Lowery was also deeply interested in public outreach, so much so that he compromised the research value of these specimens by placing them in the public exhibits for everyone to see. The four mounts above, as well as the Rough-legged Hawk mount illustrated on p. 4, are Louisiana's first state records of these species. There are no additional records of Brewer's Sparrow and no other specimens of Rough-legged Hawk. Although the plumage and painted soft parts of these specimens are now bleached by the harsh fluorescent lights that were first used in these displays, interesting aspects of each specimen can nonetheless still be observed. For example, note the primary molt (arrow A) on the Wilson's Storm-Petrel - typical for birds "summering" the Gulf of Mexico. The Brewer's Sparrow has a new/stunted tail feather on the right side, certainly unusual molt for this species at that time of the year - but ongoing studies at LSUMNS suggest such "defects" are found frequently in late migrants and vagrants.

Specimen records reviewed at the meeting (all specimens archived at LSUMNS):

Black-bellied Whistling-Duck (Dendrocygna autumnalis)

One sex unknown juvenile (1970-07) on 26 November 1970, Bossier: approximately 5 mi. N of Bossier City, section 34, township 19N, range 13W (LSUMZ 69137).

Golden Eagle (Aquila chrysaetos)

One sex unknown (1973-05) on 13 February 1973, Concordia: near Ferriday (skeleton, LSUMZ 77760). The right hand skull is the Golden Eagle - compare to juvenile (center) and adult (left) Bald Eagle skulls - in addition to coloration of the bill (dark on Golden, Yellow on Bald), note the size of prefrontal process (arrow) which, despite varying in size between the differently aged Bald Eagles, is much larger on the Golden Eagle.

Yellow Rail (Coturnicops noveboracensis)

Two (1952-14) on 23 October 1952, East Baton Rouge: 1.5 mi. S LSU campus (LSUMZ 29,30: two mounts).

One (1952-06) on 27 October 1952, East Baton Rouge: 1.5 mi. S LSU campus (LSUMZ 31: mount).

LBRC 2009-99

LBRC 2009-59

California Gull (Larus californicus)

One immature (juvenile molting to first basic) female (2009-59) on 20 September-3 October 2009, Cameron: approximately 1/2-1 mi. E of Holly Beach (LSUMZ/DLD 9835).

One definitive adult completing primary molt (2009-99) on 27 September 2009, Cameron: 4 mi. W of old mouth Mermentau River, 29.7728°N, 93.1925°W (LSUMZ/DLD 9718).

Pomarine Jaeger (Stercorarius pomarinus)

One adult female (1962-04) in worn definitive basic plumage molting to alternate plumage (rectrices #1 growing in) on 20 April 1962, Cameron: 1 mi. W of West Jetty (LSUMZ 28731). Note uniformly dark underwing lining on partially opened wing (confirming age).

Lesser Nighthawk (Chordeiles acutipennis)

One male (2000-98) on 18 April 2000, Cameron: Hwy. 82 approximately 2 mi. W Holly Beach (LSUMZ/DLD 9565; feathers only). The feathers are shown (image to left) next to a carcass of a female Lesser Nighthawk. Compare to the carcass and note relative placement on feathers of white patch in primaries and buff spotting on other feathers supporting the identification as this species.

Hammond's Flycatcher (Empidonax hammondi)

One female (1957-06) on 17 January 1957, Rapides: Woodworth (LSUMZ 22057). This is the first state record.

Cassin's Vireo (Vireo cassinii)

One immature male (1987-04) on 20 September 1987, Cameron: Garner Ridge, 3 mi. W of Johnsons Bayou School (LSUMZ 135161). This is the first state record (bottom specimen; an immature male Cassin's Vireo from Arizona is top specimen shown for comparison) and was not previously published in an LBRC report.

Cassin's Vireo (Vireo cassinii)

One immature female (2009-95) on 3 October 2009, Cameron: Johnsons Bayou area (LSUMZ/DLD 9823). This is the second state record. Probably the best character to separate Cassin's Vireo from Blue-headed Vireo is the very diffuse appearance of the border between the greenish-gray cheek and white throat; on Blue-headed, the contrast is conspicuous even on less well-marked immature females.

Brown-chested Martin (Phaeoprogne tapera fusca)

One immature male molting to first basic (2009-96) on 6 September 2009, Cameron: Fruge Road, 0.4 mi. S of Pine Pasture Road (LSUMZ/DLD 9700). This represents a first state record.

One definitive adult completing primary molt (2009-99) on 27 September 2009, Cameron: 4 mi. W of old mouth Mermentau River, 29.7728°N, 93.1925°W; Steven W. Cardiff (LSUMZ/DLD 9718) and Donna L. Dittmann (ph: p. 6).

Glaucous Gull (Larus hyperboreus)

One second basic (2009-91) on 18 October 2009, Jefferson: Elmer's Island; Phillip A. Wallace (ph: p. 11).

Great Black-backed Gull (Larus marinus)

First Record of Jabiru for Louisiana

On 27 July 2008, Bill Stelly, Jr. photographed a Jabiru right before sunset in a cane field in Charenton, St. Mary Parish. At a distance of 30-40 yards, with a brand new camera, he obtained a very good photo (left). The bird was only observed by Bill and his father. Although Bill had no experience with this species, he determined the identification based on his photos by using Whatbird.com.

Then, on 31 July 2008, while censusing birds at the LDWF Sherburne WMA South Farm complex, Michael A. Seymour and Joshua T. Sylvest found and photographed presumably the same adult Jabiru!

The timing of this record fits the pattern of vagrancy to the US and helped convince the LBRC that this record did not involve an escaped captive.

Other updates from the LBRC

By Donna L. Dittmann and Steven W. Cardiff

In addition to records accepted at the 2010 Annual Meeting, the LBRC reviewed numerous records since publication of the 2009 Newsletter. These included results from e-rounds and old-fashioned mail circulation rounds. The slow "snail mail" process of circulating rounds will eventually be phased out.

Probably the most notable result of e-round activity was the acceptance of Louisiana's first record(s) of Jabiru. Due to close timing, location, and individual similarity, the Committee regarded both records as most likely pertaining to the same individual. Compare photographs above.

The Committee also accepted the first hard-evidence record of Red-throated Loon (see page 15). Following the change in the bylaws to accept only first state records supported by hard evidence, the previously accepted first state record had been relegated to the Hypothetical List.

Both of these state firsts will appear in the Eleventh Report of the LBRC.

Consideration of Committee Expansion

Following this Spring's Annual Meeting, Committee Members are reevaluating the role of Alternate Members. One Alternate was added Fall 2001 to be on standby for Annual Meetings in case of an emergency absence by a Voting Member. Following such an emergency, a 2nd Alternate was added Fall 2002 to provide additional backup. Because Alternates have become increasingly involved in the LBRC process, the Committee is now considering converting those positions to full Member status (increase committee to nine members). Stay tuned for further updates.

First “hard evidence” of Red-throated Loon

On 24 January 2009, while searching reservoirs for potentially interesting wintering loons and other waterbird species, Devin (photos at right and below) and Justin Bosler found and photographed a Red-throated Loon at Caney Creek Reservoir near Womack. It represented the first record for the state supported by hard evidence. The bird was subsequently seen by numerous Louisiana observers, but none were able to obtain better photos than those shown at right.

There is only one previous accepted record, which was subsequently placed on the Hypothetical List because it lacked hard evidence. The 2009 record will appear in the 11th Report of the LBRC.

Updates to State and Review lists

With the addition of the four new species mentioned in this newsletter (photos right), the official State List has grown to 471 species. All species newly added to the State List are also automatically added to the Review List, which now includes 148 species (and Monk Parakeet).

If you haven't already done so, please submit any additional supporting information for records contained within this or the 2009 LBRC newsletters, or for any records currently seen at the “view pending records” section of the LBRC website so that all relevant information for these records can be incorporated into the forthcoming Eleventh Report of the LBRC. The LBRC would like to thank all observers who take the time to submit documentation. The Tenth Report is available online: http://losbird.org/jlo\_v8.pdf

Please send any corrections for records contained within this newsletter to Donna L. Dittmann, ddittma@gmail.com.
